

ALL THINGS AEROFLOW SLEEP NEWSLETTER

Sleep Affects Your Everyday

For years, Aeroflow Sleep's unofficial tagline has been "sleep well, live better." There's a reason for that. You can't live better without sleeping well.

When we want to get healthy, we often talk about things like eating right, exercising regularly, and drinking water. We forget how important a good night's rest is, and that's why Aeroflow Sleep is returning to its roots this month.

Throughout May, we'll collectively take a look at what it means to sleep better with and without CPAP.

May is also Mental Health Awareness Month, so we're making that part of our focus too. After all, there's a lot of overlap between mental health and sleep apnea. Follow along to learn more as we connect it all back to you!

The Dangers of Not Replacing Your CPAP Equipment

Over time, allergens, mold, and bacteria can get trapped in your CPAP supplies and make you sick.

CURRENT PROJECTS:

MORE THAN BRAND LOYALTY

Spring Awakening may have ended, but your PAP therapy hasn't. You may recall, Aeroflow Sleep offered Medicare patients who joined our family in April the chance to win extra sleep products.

While this offer may have enticed you to try us out one month, why should you keep coming back to Aeroflow Sleep? We promise, it's more than brand loyalty.

Because your PAP therapy is continuous, you need a PAP supplier who can commit as much as you do. Otherwise, tech will become outdated, possibly unserviceable, and your parts will deteriorate so you won't be sleeping better after all. You could even get sick!

Aeroflow Sleep has staffed an entire team just to replace your PAP supplies on-time and up to 100% through insurance. That's why you should stay with us. We're here to help! Always.

WHY DO I FEEL CLAUSTROPHOBIC WHILE WEARING A CPAP MASK?

After Aeroflow Sleep assesses any ongoing mental health concerns you may have, we check to see if new concerns started with your PAP therapy.

We often hear from new PAP patients that they feel claustrophobic while wearing a CPAP mask. Dr. Weiss explains why that is and how you can prevent it in this episode of "Weiss Words."

THE THIRD PHILIPS RECALL

In the summer of 2021, the most popular PAP machine in America was recalled. Philips Respironics was the manufacturer, and while it seemed we could finally put THAT recall behind us, another was introduced for its masks.

The Food & Drug Administration (FDA) announced that Amara, DreamWisp, and DreamWear CPAP masks should be replaced if the patient or a person near the patient has pacemakers, ICD, metal implants, etc. This is because the aforementioned masks have magnetic clips that could cause irreparable damage to those affected. This was the second Philips Respironics recall, initiated August 2022.

The third (and we hope, the final) recall went public on April 7th of this year, and yes, it was still a Philips Respironics product. In fact, remember that most popular PAP machine that was first recalled? Replacements issued by Philips between December 2021 & October 2022 are what's now being recalled, because new devices were assigned incorrect or duplicate serial numbers.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN FOR YOU, AS AN AEROFLOW SLEEP PATIENT?

Luckily, the majority of Aeroflow Sleep's patients do NOT have to worry about this third recall at all, because we stopped providing our patients with Philips Respironics machines from the very beginning.

If you are one of the unlucky few who have not yet joined the Aeroflow Sleep family, let's change that now, so you can be confident in your PAP supplier.
